The Treasure at Dog Head is a reflection of a bold and remarkable setting contrasted against a creative human design. The backdrop to this inviting cabin is a jaw-dropping tumble of massive granite formations carved into notable shapes, most particularly the prominent “Dog Head”. This amazing back-yard open-space offers daily expeditions to challenge the everyday pioneer. Break new ground or discover century old trails that track along the hillsides and lead to impressive rock summits with astonishing vistas. These peaks are all accessible, climbable and a constant reminder of the inspiration, endurance and wonder of Mother Nature’s handiwork. The cabin is an instinctive tribute to this “treasured” site and offers a décor that compliments the area’s local history – one rich in stories of the wild-west, of log-built cabins, gold panning and living off the land through hunting, fishing, and tracking. Inside the cabin, marvel at the creative mountain-themed design and attention to history - intricate details in the many local antiques and a cache of all-inclusive furniture and wall art. Each time you look around, you’ll uncover something interesting you missed before. Relaxing is encouraged on the enormous wrap-around deck. Just hang out by watching clouds swirl across the Colorado blue skies or be entertained by the colors of the setting sunlight against the magnificent back drop of the surrounding mountain ranges including Pikes Peak, the Sangre De Cristo’s and rock formations such as, Dog Head, Sheep and Dome Rocks. The Treasure at Dog Head is a gathering place like no other - one that provides a sense of awesome beauty, adventure and excitement plus appreciation for the historical significance and achievements of the pioneers, ranchers, gold-miners and homesteaders who once sought their own treasures within the Pikes Peak Region.
